Breadth of Experience

The EWCS professionals have substantial experience in most industries, including but not limited to aerospace and defense; consumer goods; electronic technology; finance and insurance; food and beverages; healthcare/medical; heavy industry and manufacturing; life sciences; metals & mining; oil & gas and energy; real estate and hospitality; and retail and apparel. Our experts have done transactions within these segments, and use their "real world" experience in approaching the projects.

In addition, our professionals are well-accustomed to working with spotty or incomplete data, including in situations where all historical information may be suspect due to fraud and requiring forensic accounting. Our analytical work product frequently deals with issues relating to damages, various approaches to valuation, solvency and debt capacity, fraudulent conveyance, and "what if" analyses (particularly in cases where there has been an alleged breach of duty). Our years of experience also allow us to opine on what reasonably prudent actors should have done in a given situation.

In short, our breadth of experience gives us significant advantages in perspective and credibility vs. experts that approach the world primarily from a theoretical valuation standpoint.
